

VALUES EXCHANGE (Vx) Think Screen guidance

This document outlines the steps that make up the Vx Think Screen.

There are no right or wrong answers; a 'good' answer is one that is well thought through and can be justified with clear reasoning.

There are three screens to work through (Basics, Reactions, Reasons) and these can be completed in any order. Use the coloured wheel to move between screens.

The Values exchange uses proposals to debate, in order to bring value judgements to the surface. Please address just the proposal, agreeing or disagreeing with it, and explain your feelings and reasoning using the interactive screens. Address the proposal as yourself - react as you would personally - we want to know YOUR values.

Use only those wedges and tiles that you need - less is more. For each wedge or tile chosen use the free text box to expand your thinking. In the 'Reactions' screen once you have chosen your wedges, click on each one in turn and by clicking, holding and dragging the paddles, adjust each wedge to better represent its importance.

In the 'Reactions screen (above) build your pie to best represent how you feel. You can add any number of the ideas and then respond to the associated questions. Just simply click on the rectangular blocks you think best portray the way you feel about the proposal Use the free text box to expand your thinking and explain your choices.

See below for an example -see how the user has chosen just the wedges that reflect the way they feel about the proposal plus they have used the free text to expand upon their thinking. Each segment can be re-sized by simply clicking on the specific wedge then clicking, holding and dragging the paddles.

In the 'Reasons' screen, choose the tiles that best help construct your argument. Probably 3-5 tiles are optimal but fewer or more will also be ok! Again please use the free text box to expand and elaborate upon your thinking. Click the green 'Submit' button where you'll be asked to think of an alternative proposal if you can.

After submitting the Vx will automatically generate a report summarising your responses. To access full reports of everyone else who has completed the Case choose 'Quotes' from the Reports page. You can also explore all the data using any of the other Reports page filters.
